OVER THOUSAND AT DEDICATION OF MASON'S HOME

Public is Invited to Inspect Temple on Monday

More than a thousand persons were present at the dedication services at the new Brinton Memorial Masonic Temple last evening, despite the heavy snow fall and rapidly falling temperature, which marked the afternoon and evening. It was estimated that about 1,300 persons were in attendance at the program and more than 300 couples were on the ball room floor at the close of the dedication ceremonies.

Grand Master Louis L. Emmerson of Mt. Vernon, assisted by other of the officers of the Grand Lodge, carried out the beautiful and impressive dedication ceremony. Congressman Henry R. Rathbone of Chicago, who has appeared before the local Masonic bodies on several occasions as a guest of the evening and gave a short talk. Coe, Past Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of Illinois, who presided during the evening. In a few well chosen remarks, he called attention to the generous gifts and donations received by the Dixon Masonic bodies. He then introduced Col. William B. Brinton and daughter, Miss Helen, who made brief remarks. He then introduced those who were responsible for the beautiful home of the Masonic bodies, beginning with the architect, N. Max Dunning of Chicago; contractors P. H. Lorenz and E. J. Groth of Moline, sub-contractors Otto Witzleb and Walter Cromwell of this city; the heads of the various Masonic organizations, the members of the building committee and Alfred P. Armington, chairman and his associate members of the finance committee, who were paid a high tribute for the manner in which the new home has been financed.

Quartet a Feature.

Throughout the program the Imperial Quartette of Chicago was heard in a number of selections. At the conclusion of the dedicatory service, dancing was enjoyed in the spacious big ball room until midnight hour. Out-of-town guests who were present and participated in the dedicatory program were entertained at a 6:30 dinner at the Hotel Dixon last evening.

The Temple will be open for public inspection Monday, from 10 to 12 o'clock in the afternoon, from 2 to 5 o'clock in the evening and during the evening. The general public is invited to visit and inspect the building during these open hours.

OLD MASTERS

As toilsome I wandered Virginia's woods.

To the music of rustling leaves kicked by my feet (for twas autumn).

I marked at the foot of a tree the grave of a soldier;

Mortally wounded he and buried on the retreat (easily all could I understand),

The halt of a mid-day hour when up no time to lose—yet this sign left.

On a tablet scrawled and nailed on the tree by the grave.

Bold, cautious, true, and my loving comrade.

Long, long I muse, then on my way go wandering.

Many a changeful season to follow, and many a scene of life.

Yet at times, through changeful season and scene, abrupt, alone, or in the crowded street.

Comes before me the unknown soldier's grave, comes the inscription rude in Virginia's woods.

Bold, cautious, true, and my loving comrade.

—Walt Whitman: "As Toilsome I Wandered Virginia's Woods."

Miss Mabel Pearse
To Wed Wm. Hoyle

Last evening at the home of her father, F. M. Pearse, on N. Galena avenue, Miss Mabel Pearse entertained a number of friends, and at this time announced her engagement to William Hoyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hoyle, of Route 8, South Dixon. Both are highly esteemed young folks, with many friends.

The Pearse home was gay with Christmas decorations in greens and festoons of red and green, candles and a handsome tree. Bridge was the amusement and Miss Althea Hubbell won the favor for high score; Miss Anna Hoffman winning the second favor, and Miss Helen Edwards the consolation trophy. A tempting two-course luncheon was served, the table being beautifully decorated. With the serving of the second course the announcement of the engagement was made in the favors, the figure of a dainty girl bearing the message. The wedding will take place some time in February.

TO HOLD ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PARTY NEXT WEEK—

Next week Mrs. Guy Miller will entertain the children of the neighborhood of her home, as is her custom, with a Christmas party at her home. Each year the youngsters look forward to this party with much glee, as the tree is always a large one laden with gifts and beautifully decorated. Mrs. Miller was to have entertained with the party this week but so many of the children are ill that she has postponed it.

This afternoon, however, Mrs. Miller is entertaining for a few of the children who are leaving town, who have been spending the holidays with relatives here.

Birthday Happily Observed Thursday

Virginia Grace Carroll and Charles Carroll, niece and nephew of Mrs. Guy Miller are here from Evanston this winter, making her home with her. On Thursday Mrs. Miller delightfully entertained eight little girl friends for her niece, who was fourteen years old that day, and such a happy birthday as it was, both for Virginia and her friends. The lovely tree, which is in readiness for the annual Christmas party which Mrs. Miller holds each year for the children of the Boyd street neighborhood, with other beautiful Christmas decorations in the home, added to the happiness and festivity of the occasion. Games and tempting refreshments completed the happy afternoon for all present. Dorothy Taylor, who is visiting here from Springfield, was a guest.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF SERVICE.

He was on liaison duty with a battalion of the 306th Infantry, which was surrounded by the enemy north of the Forest de la Buionne of Argonne Forest. After patrols and runners had been repeatedly shot down while attempting to carry back word of the battalion's position and condition, he volunteered for the mission and successfully accomplished it.

The citation does not express the hell that was the Forest de la Buionne in those awful days. No citation expresses fully the great deed of the man it is meant to praise.

How he ran, how he dodged, how he flattened out and crawled inch after precious inch through what seemed hours, and through what seemed endless miles of mud, how he fell into a shell hole just as a hot hall of machine gun bullets swept the field, how he felt, in that last mad dash, the sudden shooting pain that told him he had been hit—all that the citation leaves out.

But that is what the man did, and he saved "the lost battalion." His name—probably it will not live as long as Nathan Hale's or Paul Revere's—is Abraham Krotoshinsky, and his home New York.

The other day President Coolidge, by executive order, made Abraham Krotoshinsky eligible for appointment in the general executive service of the Government. That means he can be appointed anywhere in the United States to a government job.

And, for this crippled veteran, out of work, but too proud to ask for charity, it was little enough, after all these years. It represents the barest acknowledgment of service Abraham Krotoshinsky could receive.

THE MEASURE OF CULTURE.

A minister recently completed a two-year survey of American cities and announced that Cleveland now is the most cultured city in the United States. The reason, he says, is that Cleveland now spends $1.39 per capita for annual library maintenance, against smaller sums spent by other cities, New York buying only 40 or 50 cents worth of new books per year per head.

The minister, in giving the results of his survey, however, gave one of the best reasons why it can be disputed. He told the story of the rich man who found that a home built for him had fifty-two feet of book-shelves. Thereupon he sent in an order for "fifty-two feet of books."

We do not believe the ownership of books determines culture—at least we hope it's something higher than that.

THE BADGE OF SHAME.

In Chicago a scheme has been proposed whereby those found responsible for automobile accidents would wear badges of shame. The motorist would be obliged to turn in his license plates, receive others marked with red numerals and use these for a period of six months.

It looks like a good plan. The careless driver would wear a label marking him as dangerous among his fellows. Wherever he drove other motorists would look upon his disgrace. At the end of the six months if he were not a careful driver, it would be because he didn't care what people thought of him. Of most men this plan should make careful drivers.

Men take pride in their driving, just as they do in a good piece of work done. With their driving advertised as unskillful, terrible, they soon would take steps to repair it. No man likes to have it shouted to the world that he is a failure, and most men do like to think of themselves as good drivers.

Seventeen thousand people in the United States are killed in automobile mishaps every year. If the "badge of shame" idea can cut that number down, it is worth the trial.

A strange mechanism was found in the lobby of a Detroit office building. Police called it a bomb and threw it in the lake before anyone had a chance to suggest that it might be the new Ford car.

Prince George fell out of an automobile the other day. The king of England had better never let those boys take up aviation.

We wish to nominate as one of the most successful men of 1927 the Iowa man who listed his assets at $977 and liabilities at $866,000.

Believe it or not, but at a bankers' banquet in Paris the other day, a young American singer rendered "O Promise Me."

Harry Thaw has gone to Hollywood. Is it possible the young man is becoming a trifle wild?

They're using chemicals to ripen fruit now, but that's an old recipe for corn and rye.

Bills ready for the House of Representatives so far number 8459. It seems there are a few things which haven't been prohibited.

angular-shaped, too, and a queer, ugly blue.

A wave of faintness swept over her and without considering the incongruity of her action, she carefully measured a dose of aromatic spirits of ammonia into a glass, added water, looked at the cloudy liquid curiously, then drank it. The faintness passed quickly and she let herself out of the bathroom very quietly. A burst of laughter, dominated by Junior's hearty young bellow. Grandpa's shrill voice: "What's that? I didn't hear ye! What's that ye say?"

No, she couldn't face them all again. At the thought of the ordeal her knees buckled weakly. Of course she must run away. It wouldn't be fair to do—that thing—in Fay's house. Fay was going to have a baby. A bad scare now might be fatal, for the baby at least—Baby! The word made her pause on her tiptoe progress down the hall. She couldn't run away without seeing little Hope again—Cherry's baby. But she mustn't remember now that it was Cherry's baby. She wouldn't hope was hers, hers! She had taken care of Hope all the six months of her life. Hope would miss her.

She turned into the bedroom that had once been Cherry's and was now Fay's guest room. Hope was lying in the middle of the double bed, her almost emptied bottle beside a sleep-flushed, lovely cheek. Faith bent over the bed, dispassionately surprised that she felt no more pain at saying goodbye forever to the baby that had been hers almost as truly as if she had given birth to it. Funny that she felt nothing. But this queer numbness was better than a very toothache of agony along every nerve such as would come later if she didn't hurry, hurry—

She did not think of her coat and hat until a vicious gust of icy wind seized her dark-blue silk skirt and whipped it above her knees. But she never considered going back into the house for them.

Very cunningly she planned her escape so that she might not be seen. She ran fleetly through the back yard to the alley, was dismayed only for a moment to discover that Junior had at last mended the rickety fence.

She and Cherry had slipped through that gap when they were children—over the fence she climbed as agilely as if she were still a child, and dropped to the rutty ground. She had no plan yet, except to get away. Breathless, her cheeks stung scarlet with the cold, she emerged at a cross street—Vine Street. She was aware that passing motorists looked at her curiously.

"Faith! Faith! Wait a minute!"

She was crossing Vine Street, unmindful of danger, but at the shouted command she drew up, her skirt whipping the hood of a car. George Pruitt was leaning toward her, his face ludicrous with amazement.

Faith's dazed, mad eyes stared at George Pruitt for a moment as if she did not recognize him, then she wheeled and began to run down the middle of the street, reckless of the cars which skidded or swerved sharply to keep from hitting her.

Before she reached the first cross street a hand seized her arm roughly, jerked her to safety upon the sidewalk.

"For God's sake, what are you doing, Faith?" George demanded harshly.

"Taxi!" Faith repeated stupidly, struggling to release herself. "I wish it had. Let me go, George. I don't want to see anyone."

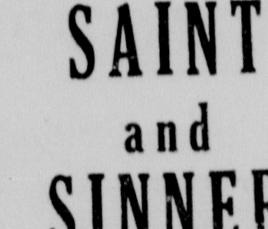

"Are you crazy?" George shook her, his violence increasing with his anxiety. "I'm going to put you in my car, out of this icy wind, and you're going to tell me what the devil this is all about. Come along now, or I'll pick you up and carry you."

She submitted with sudden docility.

George Pruitt bundled her into the front seat of his maroon-colored coupe and wrapped a thick plaid blanket about her, crossing it over her breast like a shawl and tucking the fringed ends about her feet.

"I suppose you've had some row with your brother or with Cherry, and beat it out of the house like a

SAINT and SINNER

The part of her brain that was still sane looked on and congratulated itself on its cunning and calmness as Faith selected bottles from the large store in the medicine chest. She was glad that Fay had not thrown away the drugs which had accumulated during her mother's long illness. Here were a few of Mrs. Lane's veronal tablets left. Faith thrust the bottle into her handbag, which she had been clutching tightly since her return from the house that already seemed like another woman's home to her. Cherry would have it—but she mustn't think of Bob and Cherry now. Here was a bottle of iodine. Did iodine burn your mouth and lips? But what did it matter? A dark-brown, triangular bottle of bichloride of mercury tablets, trihysterical fool of a woman would, coatless and hatless in this freezing weather. I'm going to take you home," he told her grimly.

"I've left my husband," Faith said with curious calmness. "I shall not go back to him. No one can make me go back to him." Her brown eyes bright with the madness which had so suddenly descended upon her, challenged him defiantly. She saw a flush sweep over his homely, swarthy face, to the roots of his rust-red, curly hair, and remembered with a queer satisfaction that George had been in love with her before she had married Bob Hathaway, that he was still in love with her.

"What happened, Faith?" George asked quietly, his voice so gentle that her face began to twitch with a threatened spasm of weeping.

"I can't tell you," she cried. "Why should I tell you? I'm just not going back. I'd rather die." She caught herself up with a gasp. She was going to die anyway.

ARE YOU a "TOXIC"

A Gripping of the Heart

A sudden gripping of the heart, then a feeling that it has stopped completely—that's a serious sign. Many people today suffer heart trouble as a result of system-poisoning. It comes from our abnormal living habits which put too great a strain upon the "purification" organ, the liver. The liver becoming sluggish and congested fails to cleanse the blood of poisons formed in food waste. The whole system then becomes toxic, with stomach kidneys, heart and blood vessels affected. The liver, especially at middle life, needs a little help, and there's nothing better for this, as physicians today know, than a little ox gall. Ox gall is a great natural stimulant for the human liver, promoting its normal active functioning, so essential to health and vitality. Dixol tablets are genuine ox gall in dainty and tasteless form, each tablet representing 10 drops of pure ox gall. They cost less than 2¢ each at good druggists, and one or two days' use will prove itself. To be sure of getting the genuine ox gall, be sure of Dixol.

"BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a divorce lawyer to whom she is engaged, discovers that her younger sister, Helene, has become infatuated with Huntley Sheldon, a wealthy Don Juan whose wife, Nita, is making a fourth attempt to divorce him. Myra disguises herself and goes to Sheldon's hunting lodge to frighten him into giving up Helene. Sheldon, recognizing Myra, pretends a heart attack, forcing her to remain with him all night. Nita arrives next morning, but Myra escapes without being identified. Then she finds that Helene has eloped with Ralph Naylor. Myra, believing herself safe from detection, has just received a warning visit from Sheldon.

Myra had some idea of what it might be that was worrying Helene—Huntley Sheldon. But she was thinking of it having only one element in it. She didn't want to mention the name until Helene did, and then she could explain only what she felt was necessary for the girl to know. She could not, however, realize what was passing through Helene's mind at that moment. But she was not at all surprised when Helene spoke.

"Myra, has Huntley Sheldon been here?" Helene watched Myra's face closely.

"Sheldon! Why, what ever made you think that?" Myra kept her head bent low over her work.

"I just wondered. I—I was a little worried after that evening. Why was Myra not telling the truth? Had something terrible happened, or what. Helene pondered.

"Now, you mustn't worry any more about that, Helene." Myra

"I'd like to speak to Mr. Sheldon please."

faced her sister, smiling. "It's all past and you have nothing to fear. You're just to be very happy now." Of course, that was it, Myra told herself. Helene didn't know anything about Sheldon's visit. She was merely worried about her own connections with the man and was afraid he might cause some trouble. If anything had happened, now, it would be her worry—not Helene's.

Helene crushed the cigarette stubs in her handkerchief. They were too real, too tangible, not to be considered as evidence. "All right, Myra. You've been a wonderful sister to me, and some day I'm going to show you how much I appreciate it." She got up and kissed Myra. "There, now the water's boiling. You'd better take it off."

"Splendid. At the apartment?" "O, that would be fine." You don't know what you're letting yourself in for, Mr. Sheldon, Helene murmured to herself. Just wait until you see who's going to turn the tables.

"And I'll see that we're not disturbed," Sheldon promised eagerly. "Fine. At two thirty, then. Bye-bye." Helene hung up the phone quickly and retreated to her room, for she could hear Myra preparing to emerge. And when her sister did come out Helene was ostensibly just beginning to awaken.

But perhaps Sheldon might not have been so highly gratified, and Helene might have set her mouth in an even more grim line, could they have seen what was happening on the telephone connection. For Botts was "tapping" the line and listening intently to the conversation. On a little pad he was making notations as to the time, the place and the girl. He was puzzled, however, at the name "Helene" that Sheldon had mentioned. He couldn't fit her into the scheme of things, but his one hope was that she might be the woman whom he had seen on Sunday morning at the Lodge. However, he would find the afternoon's work easy sailing, no doubt, for he couldn't miss such an obvious rendezvous.

BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES

uation. Yes, clearly, this was what had happened.

She began to conceive a tremendous dislike to the man who had so nearly made a wreck of her life. Indeed, she was growing very dramatic over the entire affair. He should not be allowed to hurt Myra. She would take matters into her own hands—but how? That was the question. Perhaps she'd think of something by morning.

Pondering over the question Helene slept fitfully, but by the time morning had arrived she was coming nearer to her solution. And when she finally awoke she had decided what she should do. She must see Huntley Sheldon and tell him just exactly what she thought of him. Tell him that he couldn't pull any of his tricks on her sister. That was all there was to do about it. Myra had taken care of her, and now she must protect Myra. She must make Sheldon realize that he must give Myra up.

Helene looked in through the bathroom door, where she could see Ralph shaving. That would keep him occupied for the next ten minutes, anyhow. She got out of bed and crept softly across the room and then went on to Myra's door to listen. She could hear her sister humming. Myra always hummed when she sat in front of her dressing table combing her hair. That would do away with the possibility of an interruption from Myra for some few minutes. The coast was clear.

"Sheldon! Why, what ever made you think that?" Myra kept her head bent low over her work.

"I just wondered. I—I was a little worried after that evening. Why was Myra not telling the truth? Had something terrible happened, or what. Helene pondered.

However, he would find the afternoon's work easy sailing, no doubt, for he couldn't miss such an obvious rendezvous.

If this were true, then something must be done, and, quite logically, the task fell on Helene. She must find some plan whereby she could extricate Myra. She felt that she had grown up considerably since she had been married, and would be quite able to cope with any sit-

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

MORE PUBLICITY FOR WHOLE TEAM IS ROPER'S PLEA

Says Sports Writers Give Too Much Attention to Star

New York, Dec. 31—(AP)—What football needs is less publicity for its stars and more about the teams as a whole, in the opinion of W. W. Roper, newly elected president of the American Football Coaches' Association.

Princeton's football mentor, at the annual banquet of the coaches' association last night, declared himself opposed to the practice of some sport writers who devote long columns of space to the accomplishments of a backfield sensation and dismiss the remainder of the team with bare mention.

There still is plenty of room for the development of football, Major John L. Griffith, Commissioner of the Big Ten and executive Secretary of the National Amateur Athletic Federation, told the coaches, citing the growth in college population and the abundance of money as two factors which led him to believe that the peak has not yet been reached.

Commenting upon the decrease in public criticism of the game during the past season, Mr. Griffith said he believed these former critics had come to realize that the so-called evils of football are not inherent in the game but are the result of mal-administration.

The banquet climaxed a busy day which had seen the association go on record in favor of eliminating this year's new rules affecting the use of the lateral pass and recovery of the muffed punt, and appoint three observers to sit during deliberations of the national rules committee. Appointment of the observers were named on invitation of Edward K. Hall, chairman of the rules committee after the coaches had asked for greater consideration when the rules are made. The observers will be Rockne, Hugo Bezdek, of Penn State, and Bill Spaulding of the University of California, Southern branch. Of the ten actual members on the rules committee, five are coaches.

THREE ENTRANTS IN VERDES GOLF SHATTERED PAR

Some Good Cards Turned in Qualifying Tourney Play

Los Angeles, Dec. 31—(AP)—The initial round of qualifying play for the $2,500 Palos Verdes open golf tournament found three professionals able to shatter par while another equalled it with a card of 71.

Al Watzros, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Fred Morrison, local professional, tied for first honors yesterday with 69. Harry Cooper, and Eddie Loose, both of Los Angeles, needed 70 and 71 respectively.

More than a dozen came within three strokes of par. Hutt Martin of Reno and Jack Tarrant of Encino, Cal., made it in 72. Bob Clark, Alameda, Cal., Olin Dutra, Fresno, Cal., and Dallas Jeffers, Corona, Cal., had 73's. Tommy Armour, Washington, National open champion took 74 as did George von Elm, former amateur title holder. Joe Turnesa and Tony Manero of New York and Al Espinosa and George Wright of Chicago, MacDonald Smith, Great Neck, Long Island, and Eric Bannister, Winnipeg, also finished in this division.

Nine had 75's, including Bobby

CANZONERI IS WINNER BOUT WITH TAYLOR

Established Himself as Champion of His Division

New York, Dec. 31—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, of Brooklyn, established himself as the prevailing featherweight champion of the New York State Athletic Commission last night by virtue of a hard-earned victory over the slasher Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind.

Meeting for the third time, the batters negated in a furious ten-round combat before 13,000 spectators in Madison Square Garden.

Although Taylor waged a stiff offensive, ringside experts credited Canzoneri with the edge in seven rounds, gave Taylor two while one was seven. Canzoneri weighed 125½, four pounds more than his rival.

In previous tussles between the pair Taylor took the verdict once while other resulted in a draw.

The action of the State Athletic Commission in recognizing Canzoneri as the featherweight champion developed another title dispute as the Pennsylvania Commission backs the title claim of Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, who defeated Red Chapman, of Boston. A match between Canzoneri and Bass to settle the conflicting claims is now in prospect.

"You ought t' study a long while before you take such a step, fer it's th' most important event in your whole life. starting off with lower admission prices to boxing shows in 1928.

Paul Prehn, acting chairman, and Sam Luzzo, the new member, said today they would strive for a downward revision of the $16.50 and $11 top prices, fewer temperamental and more talented fighters, and less annoyance from minor promoters and small fry politicians.

John Bing, attaché of the commission, presented a report on a survey of prices and purses in other states, showing Chicago promoters have been paying the highest purses in the country, and consequently have been forced to charge the highest admission. Smaller crowds and even smaller profits have been the result.

The standard for preliminary boxers in other states is $10 a round but no Chicago promoter is able to get a boy to go six rounds for $60 Bing said. The windups in other states generally are on a percentage basis, while here the fighters usually work under a guarantee.

In another New Year resolution the commissioners decided to enlarge upon their custom of fining for unsatisfactory showings, with a fine and a suspension for the fighter's manager.
